

Giorgio Russo received the Laurea (summa cum laude) degree in physics in 2003, and the medical physics qualification in 2007. He is currently a staffed researcher and chief of Cefalù (PA) Unit at Italian National Research Council in the Institute of Molecular Bioimaging and Physiology. He is the Radiation Protection Expert of Catania Unit and Laboratori Nazionali del Sud, one of the four national laboratories of the Italian National Institute for Nuclear Physics; and of University of Catania. He is professor at Master's Degree in Physics of Catania University with course "Advanced Nuclear Techniques applied to Medicine". His research interests include the development and implementation of elaboration methods to biomedical imaging, and radiobiology studies on proton and x-ray beams. He has co-authored more than 107 scientific papers in referred journal and conferences, and He has an H index 15 in ISI of Knowledge.